DETAILED ACTION

Specification

1. The abstract of the disclosure is objected to because of the apparent typographical error describing the [Mw/Mn] ratio. Correction is required. See MPEP § 608.01(b).

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 112

2. The following is a quotation of the second paragraph of 35 U.S.C. 112:

The specification shall conclude with one or more claims particularly pointing out and distinctly claiming the subject matter which the applicant regards as his invention.
3. Claim 1 is rejected under 35 U.S.C. 112, second paragraph, as being indefinite for failing to particularly point out and distinctly claim the subject matter which applicant regards as the invention. The claim is confusing and vague regarding to as whether either the carbon black, the coloring agent, or both have the oil absorption capability as a positive limitation to the toner

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

4. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.
5. Claims 1-8 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Hamano (6,500,594). Hamano teaches a toner where the binder resin exhibits a low storage modulus loss over an increased temperature (col. 10 and claims). Hamano also teaches an oil absorption value in the claimed range for carbon black colorant (col.

16 lines 24-43). It would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art that the claimed decrease of storage elastic modulus would occur because of the direct teaching of Hamano and the expectation of a similar effect due to the known reaction of a low storage modulus loss over an increased temperature to improve fixability of toners.

6. Claims 1-8 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Onuma (5,968,701). Onuma teaches a toner where the binder resin exhibits a low storage modulus loss over an increased temperature (col. 10 lines 41-47 and claims). From the Examiner's interpretation of the claims, the carbon black oil absorption is not necessary in the inventive concept of the storage modulus loss. It would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art that the claimed decrease of storage elastic modulus would occur because of the direct teaching of Onuma and the expectation of a similar effect due to the known reaction of a low storage modulus loss over an increased temperature to improve fixability of toners.
